feeling, however, was fully steady with yesterday.

There was only a small sprinkling of cows and heifers and they were picked up early in the morning at good steady pilces. In fact, considering that it was a Friday, the market was really in better condition than is usual for that day.

The fresh receipts of feeders were limited to a few small bunches. As usual this late in the week the demand was not so brisk and they may possibly have sold a little lower for that reason. There were still quite a number of cattle in the hands of sneculators.
